FREMANTLE PRISON will be entered into WA’s tourism hall of fame after winning a third consecutive gold medal for cultural tourism.

“With a bit of success at the 2017 WA Tourism Awards on the weekend,” the prison’s sales and marketing manager Amberlee Hong humbly informed the Herald after the win.

“As the winner of this category we will represent WA at the Australian Tourism Awards to be held in Perth next February. We also picked up a silver medal in the major tourist attractions category.”

Prison guide Janine Della Bosca’s restricted to her cell this week after a major ankle reconstruction, but the winner of the award’s Golden Guide category says she’s never happier than leading a tour group through the world heritage-listed lock-up.

“I fell in love with this place nine years ago,” she told the Herald.

Back then she was a budding artist studying at Fremantle Tafe, which had an annexe at the prison. “I used to go out into the yard at night and paint all the walls, everyone else was terrified, but I really loved it.”

Ms Della Bosca says leading a tour isn’t just telling a few interesting anecdotes and looking at artifacts; because of a prisoner’s unique function, visitors are inevitably drawn into discussions about pretty weighty topics such as Aboriginal incarceration or capital punishment.

“These of course are taboo subjects, so you can tell it’s the first time some people have opened up about them,” she says.

Ms Della Bosca says she was overwhelmed by her first prison tour as a visitor, and says she draws on that experience to ensure participants in her tours come away with the same sense of awe.

East Fremantle’s Tradewinds Hotel took out a silver medal at the tourism awards for deluxe accommodation, while Cockburn’s Adventure World picked up silver for tourism education and training.

Fremantle Society founder Les Lauder and partner Mark Howard are moving to Tasmania.

by STEVE GRANT
FREMANTLE SOCIETY founder and former councillor Les Lauder is saying farewell to the port city and moving lock, stock and antique barrel to Tasmania.

Credited with saving dozens of Fremantle buildings from destruction during WA’s 1970s development rush, the antique dealer was awarded an Order of Australia in June for his services to heritage. But he told the Herald this week the state’s sluggish economy had seen local sales dropping off, while they’re going gangbusters in the eastern states and internationally — particularly the United States. With him and partner Mark Howard already falling in love with Hobart because of its vibrant arts scene, now seemed the right time to make the move. It’s not without some anguish, though, because we have a lot of good clients and friends over here,” Mr Lauder said. “But a lot of them have said ‘this gives us another reason to visit Hobart.’”

The pair have a lot to reflect on after 38 years in business, and a lot of the time they spent fighting to keep the community from losing its heritage. “It’s the equivalent of moving 40 households,” Mr Lauder said.

“It was a token, and it was to become an introduction to colonial WA antiques, and at that time even the museum didn’t have one; they were - and are - still very rare.

“To show how rare they really are, it took us another 25 years before we could put on another exhibition.

And while the old furniture and nicknacks were moving out, McKenzie says he got a great kick out of Mr Lauder and partner Mark Howard are moving to Tasmania.

On the day it came out, there was a phone call and it was Bill saying ‘I want to talk to you, you little bastard’ and he said ‘I can’t really tell you’,” Mr Lauder said.

The resignation had already been processed, but coming the day after McKenzie’s was the only nomination on the ballot.

Mr Lauder says he’s proud of McKenzie’s nomination as Fremantle’s heritage has helped to turn the city’s reputation around, once sneered at as the home of “wharfies, communists and prostitutes”, he says it’s now somewhere anywhere in Perth would aspire to live.

Another Day

by EMILIE NEESON

AFTER a resounding success this year, Fremantle council has some big names in store for its second One Day in Fremantle festival.

The city controversially held the free event on January 28 instead of its traditional fireworks show on Australia Day, but it was met with open arms from locals, attracting a bumper crowd of 15,000.

ARIA-nominated Kate Miller-Heike, Tame Impala DJ Kevin Parker and Arnhem Land’s Baker Boy were announced as headliners yesterday, and locals, attracting a bumper crowd of 15,000.

“Another Day will be totally different, with the pressure over its first alternative event,” says Fremantle mayor Brad Pettitt.

“The city controversially held the free event on January 28 instead of its traditional fireworks show on Australia Day, but it was met with open arms from locals, attracting a bumper crowd of 15,000.

“We had 15,000 people turn out and that was a real sense of coming together.”

Fremantle council’s decision to axe its traditional January 26 celebrations thrust the question of Australia day’s inclusiveness into the national spotlight, but Dr Pettitt expects the next One Day to be totally different, with the focus solely on celebration and unity.

“It was amazing last year,” he says. “We had 15,000 people turn out and it was all about ‘is it divisive’, but I think the conversation has moved on,” he says. “It was such a success last time that it kind of speaks for itself.

“The lead up to last year’s event it was all about ‘is it divisive’, but I think we demonstrated that it’s not actually.

“It is actually inclusive and I think this event will continue to show what a great, inclusive community Freo is. We want people to come down and be a part of that.”

One Day in Fremantle is open to people of all ages and will be held on Esplanade Reserve, Sunday, January 28, from 2pm to 9pm.

FREMANTLE just missed out on a top-20 place for supporting marriage equality in the national vote, with results announced Wednesday.

But mayor Brad Pettitt’s proud of the electorate’s “progressive” and “inclusive” vote saying that was why the city took the decision to campaign on the issue.

Fremantle’s vote was a resounding 70.1 per cent in support of same-sex marriages, somewhat behind Melbourne’s high of 83.7 per cent. Former prime minister Paul Keating’s old electorate Blaxland bought up the rear, muddling a measly 26 per cent support.

In April this year Free council adopted a proclamation in support of marriage equality and wrote to all Federal MPs urging them to allow a conscience vote on the issue.

Council Jeff McDonald, who made the proclamation, said Parliament must move quickly to amend the Marriage Act.

“Whilst the divisive and damaging plebiscite may be over, the issue of marriage equality is not yet resolved,” Cr McDonald said.

“This is a love story, not a political story. It’s actually inclusive and I think this event will continue to show what a great, inclusive community Freo is. We want people to come down and be a part of that.”

One Day in Fremantle is open to people of all ages and will be held on Esplanade Reserve, Sunday, January 28, from 2pm to 9pm.

Uni flouts MOU

by MOLLY SCHMIDT

FREMANTLE mayor Brad Pettitt is disappointed Notre Dame Uni has broken a memorandum of understanding by purchasing the Old Customs Building in the West End for an undisclosed fee.

An agreement between the university and the council encourages Notre Dame to expand throughout the CBD and not immediately adjacent to its existing buildings in the West End.

Dr Pettitt says it’s not all bad, with Notre Dame considering some student accommodation as part of the Phillimore Street building’s redevelopment.

“The inclusion of student accommodation in Customs House would be welcomed so the West End is activated for more hours of the day and more days of the year,” he says.

Notre Dame vice chancellor John Dowson said the uni had explored a number of options outside the West End, but none were suitable.

“Customs House provides a facility which is accessible, flexible, and of the appropriate size and design,” he says.

Ms Hammond added that Customs House provided an opportunity to increase ground floor activation of Notre Dame’s existing buildings.

She said NDU is still pursuing a nursing and midwifery school at the “wedding wall” on the corner of Cliff and High Streets, which was rejected by Fremantle council and the South Metro JDAP, “made a mockery” of the MOU.

One option for Customs House had been the boutique hotel model, which was proposed by Mr Dowson.

“The inclusion of student accommodation in Customs House, which would be welcomed so the West End is activated for more hours of the day and more days of the year, would be very welcome,” says Mr Dowson.

Devastated, but seeing the funny side of it all, Ms Richardson says “We know the university already owns buildings within the area,” he says. “We have been in contact for some time.”

Salvo’s rad move

by EMILIE NEESON

AFTER an unfortunate mix-up, Fremantle uni student Nina Richardson is all set to skate again.

While visiting the Salvo’s op-shop in South Fremantle last year, Ms Richardson left her $200 personalised skateboard at the front of the store, but it was mistaken for a donation and sold to a customer for just $13.

Devastated, but seeing the funny side of it all, Ms Richardson was unable to afford a replacement, and with the new owner refusing to return the board, Salvo’s area manager Kelly Morrison stepped in, contacting manufacturers Santa Cruz for a replacement.

“We didn’t know if it was going to happen,” says Ms Morrison.

“There was a lot of backwards and forwards.”

But luckily for Nina, Santa Cruz were more good, offering her a limited edition Marvel Comics board which she received last month.

Ms Richardson was delighted with the board and grateful to the Salvo’s and Santa Cruz for helping out.

“I am stoked to get a quality board and just really happy with the way the Salvo’s handled it,” she says.

Castaway

REGARDING your news story (“Marened”, Herald, November 11, 2017) about a new traffic island on Hampton Road hurting local business.

I don’t think Mr Carter’s reason for having the road island put in is entirely up front.

I live up in Curedale Street off Lefroy and have an issue with the traffic that cuts through Curedale St and exits down onto Hampton Road at the location where the island now is, thus cutting out two sets of traffic lights.

The island has now increased the traffic turning right up Lefroy in the afternoon where there is no filter light and at times it can take several light changes to get through that intersection.

Someone from Main Roads should get down there in the afternoon and observe the problem and do something to stop the traffic taking the short cut through the residential area.

David Phillips Curedale St, Beaconsfield

Cycling curfew

THERE has been a lot of discussion about cyclists on the road.

It is my opinion that not all cyclists should not be allowed on the road.

There should be a minimum age for a person to ride on the road.

Cyclists should not be allowed on the road. Some busy roads, particularly those with trucks or heavy traffic should not allow cyclists at all.

Most road accidents involving a cyclist and a motor vehicle usually happen early morning or late afternoon.

Local councils spend thousands of dollars building excellent bike paths to keep cyclists safe.

It all gets down to common sense.

Frank Granger, Melville Beach Rd, Applecross

Pete’s a wag

The change to the beach access at Leighton footbridge is a poor decision by Fremantle Council and unfair to users of the beach who do not have dogs.

This includes surfers, windsurfers, elderly, parents with babies and small children, who now have to walk well south of the footbridge to access a dog-free stretch of beach.

This is particularly galling as the dog beach is so generously long.

The council has made a wrong-headed decision based on a petition received from a dog owner.

No input was sought from anyone else.

I tried to change this decision by emailing the councillors before the meeting. However one voice is not enough.

Pete should not accept this as a fait accompli. Decisions are made and can be undone.

He should exercise his democratic rights and email his message to the councillors: number@freemantleata.gov.au.

Tooth Fairies redundant soon?...
FREMANTLE resident Alex Wilson has spent four years creating a green wonderland in the gardens of her 125-year-old heritage-listed home.

‘Monaro’, now surrounded by succulents in every shade of green, purple and red, creeping vines and a soaring sugar gum, was built in the Victorian-era for tobacco merchant, Mr Robert Dixon.

Ms Wilson is the property’s fourth owner and since moving in four years ago she’s worked hard to honour and preserve its history, whilst bringing it into the 21st century.

She is opening up Monaro, at 24 Ord Street, to the public this weekend, as part of Open Gardens West Coast, from 11am-4pm.

“This garden is a living, breathing, growing, changing space,” says Ms Wilson, who is qualified in horticulture and garden design.

Ms Wilson says Mr Dixon built Monaro as a guest house for visiting business people during the gold-rush.

“He knew people of a certain economic standing wouldn’t want to stay in a tiny room above a pub,” Ms Wilson says.

“There was even a bathroom on every level, making it about 50 years ahead of its time.” Ms Wilson says Free’s cruddy limestone soils would have meant a bare garden back then.

“The Freo Doctor was certainly still blowing back then; there was a heck of a lot of pollution in the air, coming in from the port; it was probably not til the 1930s, even 50s, that this kind of garden started to take shape.”

Previous owners were instrumental in constructing limestone retaining walls and garden terraces with the aid of architect Gerard McCann, while Free sculptor Theo Koning has two installations in the backyard and created ironwork balustrades from the original 1890s balcony.

“Teo found some cast iron lace panels rusting away in the corner of the garden and he turned them into balustrading, which was really lucky for us because when we came to restoring the front balcony, which had rotted, we wanted to reinstate the original panels,” Ms Wilson says.

“I was sitting here with the architect, and I was like, ‘well, can’t we use these panels?’”

One cleaned up enough to be used as a mould for new verandah panels at a Wagga Wagga factory.

“We really knew we were reinstating an authentic, original piece of the house, and it’s come from the garden, so it’s nice it comes full circle,” she says.

Ms Wilson says while respecting history she “didn’t want to work with hedges either”.

“The obvious take on a house like this would be very classical stuff…but I wanted to bring some softness, romance and elegance to it.

I FOUND your council’s “Election round-up” story (Herald, October 28, 2017) interesting, until there was reference to Clive Robertson romping in against Marie Curtis in Melville.

Marie was up against an incumbent [Robartson] who is part of the Aubrey group with access to meet and greet at shopping centres, support from local service groups, and I must particularly reference the Bullcreek Tennis Club, where there was a huge banner that was inclusive of both Robartson and the new Deputy Mayor.

I wonder under whose authority that advertisement was hung on what I consider a part of the Melville council and dare I ask did it contravene any local government act.

The best Marie Curtis could do against such a team was footloog and doorknock as an individual, without support and still receive 33.53 per cent of the vote.

I would suggest Robartson did not romp in, there was a clear message in that 33.53 per cent of the voters wanted change and whoever is next up for election, any opponent that is a credible opposition to Marie will be wiped out.

A study published in the October 24 Journal of the American Medical Association reveals a 500 percent increase in the levels of glyphosate on testing of urine samples of people involved in this ‘healthy aging study’ in the period 1993 to 2016.

This study begun in 1972 of a group aged over 50 and have been followed since then. Glyphosate has been used as a desiccant on non-genetically modified grain since the advent of genetic modification programmes.

The purpose is to enlarge the grain yield. This programme began in 1993. The harvest is inevitably contaminated with this chemical and enters into our diet intake.

Glyphosate is a known carcinogen. There was evidence in the documents of the company which produces this toxin that it has a significant role in non-Hodgkins lymphoma.

Further analysis needs to occur as to the impact of this chemical on the health of the community.

The health authorities in all levels of government need to act now. Fremantle council should suspend the use of Roundup and review any level of contamination in its own work-force and anyone else in the community who may be exposed.

Numbers game

IT is disappointing that Fremantle deputy mayor, Ingrid Waldth, seeks to dismiss genuine concerns about the state of the City of Fremantle’s finances as a mere joke about the number 42.

The reality is that the city’s auditors, Moore Stephens, raised concerns about this very issue when presenting the June 30, 2016 financial statements to the Audit and Risk Management Committee on November 8, 2016. Fremantle Council’s response to this is to commit ratepayers to a $50 million project to knock down and rebuild the existing civic centre in Kings Square.

HY my ever-crumbling Panther was an unrealistic folly to begin with. I grew up far away from everything. The only things I knew about the world were from books, the radio, movies and TV. These far-away lands with far away people doing amazing things. As a result, I would see these people as somewhat superhuman. I imbued them with a sense of power and awe that was previously only reserved for the characters in my comic books. Comic legends for whom I had limitless admiration—so I thought.

I grew up watching Rolf Harris—not just a comedian and entertainer but a cartoonist, too. What a role model.

I followed his whole career. He was one of the most famous, lauded and recognisable Australians of the 20th century. We went on to become friends and he eventually began to mentor me. It was a huge privilege.

I say “mentoring” but actually he showed me how to paint. He taught me about art, comedy—everything. He was unrivalled in his ability to put out funny comedy hours. Not since Carlin had people heard the jokes before. He pissed off others as his work ethic was unrivalled in his ability to put out consistently funny comedy hours.

I got to meet Louis CK a few times. Nothing major, just a hero. I saw him live about 20 times—both at big theatre venues, arenas as well as up close over a dozen times at the Comedy Cellar in New York. He was unapologetically good, but every single person I’ve come to the realisation that if you have heroes with a penis, it’s only a matter of time before you discover their second life as a sexual deviant.

I'd been convicted on several counts of child molestation and sexual misconduct. He'd be convicted on several counts of child molestaton and sexual misconduct. His alter-ego was a monster he'd hidden from everyone, including his family and friends. It was gut-wrenching. Someone I not only admired—worshipped, but knew, and called a friend.

I'm in awe of his talent—his films, his TV show and especially his stand-up. At one point CK was unrivalled in his ability to put out consistently funny comedy hours. Not since Carlin had people heard the jokes before. He pissed off others as his work ethic eclipsed theirs five-fold.

I've come to the realisation that if you have heroes with a penis, it's only a matter of time before you discover their second life as a sexual deviant.

He's so open and honest, he lives his live like an open book! Nothing could shock me about Louis—Oh, COME ON! Well, this is awkward…No more heroes for me. I'm in awe of his talent—his films, his TV show and especially his stand-up. At one point CK was unrivalled in his ability to put out consistently funny comedy hours. Not since Carlin had people heard the jokes before. He pissed off others as his work ethic eclipsed theirs five-fold.

I've come to the realisation that if you have heroes with a penis, it's only a matter of time before you discover their second life as a sexual deviant.

Heroworship is a childish folly anyway. Imbuing anyone with any kind of superhuman capacity to be the perfect person is selfish, irrational and completely unrealistic.

People aim, for the most part, good, but every single person has flaws—some more than others. They say, “Never meet your heroes.” I say “Fuck having heroes. Be your own hero—and try not to fuck it up.”
Catalan cry

by EMILIE NEESEON

CATALANS across Australia are uniting in solidarity amidst the political uncertainty in their homeland.

In Fremantle, ex-patriots are planning to meet at the Rainbow Sea Container on December 7 at 6pm, the same day a large Catalan demonstration will be held in Brussels and supported in other cities around the world.

Last Sunday a group of Catalans met in Kings Park, calling for the release of government officials from their homeland who were imprisoned following last month’s disputed referendum, which saw the Spanish government sack and arrest Catalan officials and assume control of the region.

Group spokesman Imma Fare says it’s important in times of political crisis to create awareness and give support to fellow ex-patriates.

“Being on the other side of the world you feel so impotent,” she says.

“We see all the corruption, the repression and the violence and no one does anything.”

Following the disputed referendum in Catalonia, former president Carles Puigdemont, along with several other officials were forced to flee to Brussels to avoid imprisonment and may face extradition.

Ms Fare says while the Catalans living in Perth may have different opinions regarding independence, they all agree on one thing—human rights.

She says violent action taken by police against Catalans isn’t being shown by Spanish broadcasters, so it’s up to Catalan ex-pats to increase awareness about what is really going on back home.

Ms Fare added that for many of the Catalans meeting in Kings Park, it was the first time they had met up with fellow ex-pats in Australia, and despite the unfortunate circumstances, they enjoyed the sense of community it brought.

She says everyone is welcome to come down to the meet at the Rainbow Sea Container in Freo.
Melville probe

by STEVE GRANT

MELVILLE council’s executive staff have been “too close to the issues” according to a probe by the state government.

Staff and councillors are also expected to undergo further training which will include teaching them about body language during meetings.

Following 200 complaints about Melville (100 apparently from just two people) the local government department’s governance manager met with CEO Shayne Silcox and his legal director three times to discuss the issues raised and measures to improve how the council deals with complaints.

Department staff also quietly rocked up to council meetings to keep an eye on proceedings.

Last month local government minister David Templeman wrote to the chair of council which had it analysed to determine it had been a native species.

Mr Maynier; these concerns appear to be warranted.”

He says a staffers from the new department of Biodiversity, Conservation and Attractions accepted his wife’s version of events, including her transparency, and issued the minimum infringement – a caution.

But Wave Park boss Andrew Ross says the clearing was illegal and Ms Ross would have been well aware she was not on her own property when she cut the tree.

He says his group was concerned to hear that after the recent council elections, six councillors met secretly at Mr Maynier’s home.

There has been concern expressed that candidates supported by ACAG might end up being pupils of ACAG and Mr Maynier; these concerns appear to be warranted.”

Puppet fears over ACAG meeting

Alfred Cove Action Group convenor David Maynier says recent media attention about his wife Helen receiving a caution for cutting and poisoning a tree in a foreshore reserve across a footpath from their apartment in the Pelican Cove complex has been a “setback” for the group, but little action was ever taken through about a decade ago, another fire after one ripped in the reserve for years because they’d been liaising with the state government.

According to a probe by the Melville council’s governance manager it had not been a native species.

REALLY good eateries are popping up in the most unexpected places.

Who would expect to find a high-end chef, more at home in swish international restaurants, in the semi-industrial hinterlands of South Fremantle?

For Kenny Austin and partner Hana Jestribek, Little Hawk on Strang Street is the answer to a long held wish.

“I was always looking for my own place,” Austin says. “But people have been coming from all over Fremantle,” he says.

The menu has a good selection of dishes made in-house, including gourmet beef sausage rolls, an Italian pork, potato and lentil version, an osso bucco and a lamb shank pie, along with a chicken and leek and white wine one ($25). “Everything is made in-house, including the bread,” Austin says.

Dave D’Anger and his Pommy dad ordered the roast pork rib and lentil burger ($12). The huge, but unassuming meal soon disappeared.

The best veggie burger I've had, and plenty of it,” the father-in-law said.

Junior agreed: “It didn’t need a side of chips. It was bloody beautiful and the roll was really good and crunchy on top,”

I ordered the curried vegetable samosa ($11 with salad), and for good measure tacked on a mushroom arancini ($3). The samosa, stuffed with assorted veggies including cauliflower, peas and tomatoes, had a wonderfully spicy flavour.

The beetroot salad, with baby spinach, eggplant and lentils was magnificent, and the cheesy spinach, eggplant and lentils had a wonderfully spicy flavour.

We finished-up with a raw peanut chocolate slice ($4), and peanut chocolate slice ($4). That was a bloody good meal that was.”

Each year in late November, Applecross Rotary takes over a section of leafy Ardross Street, in the heart of Applecross Village, to deliver a fantastic, family-friendly day full of fun and entertainment. Now in its 17th year, The Rotary Jacaranda Festival will be held from 9.30am-3pm on Saturday 25 November. It’s a wonderful celebration of all things ‘community’ and this year looks set to be the biggest and best yet, with fabulous local entertainment, a special kids zone and a larger gourmet food area.

With over 140 stalls showcasing artisan wares and exquisite handmade items such as jewellery, art, textiles, woodcraft, stylish eco-clothing, yummy baked goods, healthy smoothies, preserves and relishes, organic food and wines, natural body products and so much more! In addition to all the attractions of the village’s local businesses, you’ll be spoilt for choice when it comes to finding unique gifts for Christmas.

Great Entertainment

The deliciously diverse food zone with shaded seating area will be situated in The Good Grocer carpark and with all the cafes in the village, there’s no chance of going home hungry! There’s plenty of great entertainment for all ages, including The Leeming Big Band, the ever-popular Two Cent Professionals, the Rotars, three local school choirs, Choir 4 Kids, an interactive sing a long show from Freedom Fairies and the Picochet Circus. The special Kids Zone will have face painting, animal farm, stilts walkers, balloons, glitter and a bouncy castle.

Flowering Jacarandas

Not-for-profit groups, community service organisations, local businesses and hundreds of volunteers all work to make this fabulous street festival amongst the flowering Jacarandas of Applecross. Entry is always free - although gold coin donations are encouraged and funds raised are reinvested in dozens of local groups and initiatives over the coming year. City of Melville Mayor, Russell Aubrey and Local Member Dean Nalder will be present at the official opening at 10.30 am on the main stage.

Free parking is available at Applecross Primary School oval, which is a short walk away and a free Melville Cares shuttle bus will also be on hand to ferry people to and from the parking area to the festival. Applecross Rotary asks that festival attendees respect local residences and refrain from parking on lawns and blocking driveways. The Ardross Street Village precinct will be closed to all traffic on the morning of the event from 6 am, and will reopen around 4.30pm.

For further information, please visit www.applecrossrotary.org or the Rotary Jacaranda Festival Facebook page.
“A win for the community” is how a new partnership between Applecross Rotary and a group of community-minded businesses is being described.

The 45-strong member club has recently formalised its relationship with four well-known local organisations – Pharmacy 777, The Good Grocer, Mont Property and Ross North Developments – in a move that will result in a cash injection to further support its work in the local area.

Long-time Applecross Rotary member Kenn Williams helped to broker the deal which will see thousands more dollars available for community-based initiatives undertaken by the club over the next three years.

Local businessman Greg Brindle, owner of The Good Grocer and Canning Bridge IGA, described the decision to get involved in the club as a “no-brainer” and something that he hoped would serve as a catalyst for future collaboration between the local business community.

Applecross Rotary’s best known initiative is the Rotary Jacaranda Festival, an annual event which draws thousands of people to Ardross Street each year, raising thousands of dollars to help support a range of local groups and projects throughout the year.

“I see it as confidence in what we’re doing,” he added.

Applecross Rotary president Chris Whelan said the move was part of a broader strategy to support the community and future plans.

Groups such as the Waylen Bay Sea Scouts, local schools and Melville SES are set to benefit from this year’s event and will be providing manpower and entertainment on the day to help make the festival a success. For more information visit www.applecrossrotary.org or like the Rotary Jacaranda Festival Facebook page.

Applecross Rotary wishes to thank Lotterywest and The City of Melville, which have made the festival possible.

Did you know...

Applecross was acquired by Sir Alexander Percival Matheson in February 1896. Matheson, a Scot, formed the Western Australian Investment Company Limited and instigated the subdivision of the area, giving it the name of Applecross after a small fishing village on the North West coast of Scotland. He purchased much of the land which today makes up the Perth suburb of Applecross, subsequently subdividing and selling off three-quarters of it.

On becoming a parliamentarian, Matheson was joined in Perth by his wife and children - probably in 1899. They lived in style and became members of the Government House set. A number of Applecross street names commemorate his Scots heritage, the site of his family home being now known as Matheson Road.

Garry’s Mother Val grew up on the family dairy farm on Matheson Road Applecross post 1940 - The family delivered milk to the locals by horse and cart. Soon Val will celebrate her 90th Birthday at the Tivoil (next door to the Raffles Hotel) where she celebrated her 21st!

SOUTH Fremantle singer/songwriter Stella Donnelly is set to be WA’s next big musical export.

Already signed up to Phil Stevens stable, which includes John Butler, The Waifs and Sam suço, the news of her debut EP Through Metal resulted in a deal with ATP Live, the European agency behind international successes The Lumineers and Julia Jacklin.

WAMA winner

The 25-year-old wanted to establish herself as an artist in Australia before heading overseas, and has done that in spades winning the $25,000 Levi’s Music Prize earlier this year, and five WAMA awards this month.

As if best EP, best folk act, best single and best female vocalist weren’t proof enough of Donnelly’s awesome talent, she was also awarded most popular new act.

Heavily influenced by Billy Bragg, the brutal honesty of Donnelly’s songs belies the sweetness of her voice, none more so than Boys Will Be Boys. It was a hard song to write, Donnelly says, but an important message to get out there.

Written following the rape of a friend, the lyrics deal with the culture of victim blaming: “Why was she all alone? Wearing her skirt that low? They said ‘boys will be boys’... Doof to the word, No, no, no, no.”

The song garnered support from its message in Australia, but in the US she was trolled by men saying awful sexual things: “But these things make you stronger and if I’m upsetting people like that...I’m doing something right.”

Donnelly is in residence at Meloś’s, North Fremantle for three Wednesdays on December 13, 20 and 27.

She says she’s cherry-picked some amazing artists to perform with her, including Noongar choir Koondarm.

Colours of the Desert

Colours of the Desert, ABORIGINART’s latest exhibition will light up the gallery during November with some stunning new additions. These include some exciting works by Tommy Watson, Anna Pitjara, Gloria Petyarre, Gabriela Possum Nungurrayi, Kathleen Petyarre and her granddaughter Abigail Kamearre, as well as some old favourites by the late greats Minnie Pwerle, Dorothy Napangardi, Judy Watson Napangardi, Lorrae Fence Napurrula and the recently departed Kuditjiti Ljungwuyeye.

According to ABORIGINART gallery director Bill Green, “This collection has something to appeal to the most discerning indigenous art lover’s taste. From energetic splashes of bold vibrant colour to some amazing examples of intricately meticulous dot work, this diverse range of collectable paintings depicts elements of desert life. The obvious enthusiasm and passion with which these pieces are created highlights the artists’ affinity with the land.

Colours of the Desert

The Seven Sisters story is an immense songline that criss-crosses Australia through many different Aboriginal estate lands. Each Aboriginal group owns its section of the story, along with the songs and ceremonies associated with it. The story plays out every evening in the night sky when the Pleiades stars rise above the horizon. The story also has an equivalent track overland, which is part of the Women’s ceremonies recognised by vast groups of Indigenous people.

Japingka Gallery currently exhibits eight paintings of the Seven Sisters from Spinifex lands in the Great Victoria Desert. One painting is a collaboration by six women artists. The artists explain that the seven sisters are running away from a man who pursues them. As they travel across Spinifex lands, they create waterholes and sacred sites that the women celebrate. The artists also have a painting featured in the National Museum of Australia’s current exhibition titled Tracking the Seven Sisters.

Japingka Gallery’s beautiful exhibition of 30 Spinifex desert paintings is now showing through November and December.

Open daily, weekdays 10-5.30 and weekends 12-5. Exhibitions are also available to view online.

HISTORIC ENCHANTING DIVINE

Loaded with lifestyle, charm and intrigue. From the 1870s, a grand stone & iron manor with commanding views of Carnac, Garden Island and Rottnest. On the hill. Bore reticulated lawns and gardens, a walled estate of 723 sqm on Green Title. Around its borders a secluded lane provides rear access to oversized garaging, storage & work space.

Elevated from wide entry steps, a spectacular hall marches through the centre. A magnificent arch, stained leadlight, wide boards & 14ft ceilings set the period. Every window, architrave & door, showcasing beautiful craftsmanship from early days, pre gold-rush Australia.

An expansive granite kitchen and family room open onto the terrace, a sublime `would-be` reception venue for milestone birthday parties or `celebrate at home` weddings under the towering palm.

By JACKSON LAVELL-LEE

FROM an early age, O’Connor’s David Eastwood was fascinated by the potential of timber.
His painstaking approach to woodworking was instilled in him by his father, who had a shed full of wood and tools.
“I thought dad could help me make anything I dreamed up,” he says.
For the last 12 years Eastwood’s business, Raw Edge Furniture, has been making unique craft pieces from recycled WA timber and premium woods like American Walnut, French Oak and Birch Plywood.
When Eastwood launched the business in 2005, bespoke timber furniture was a niche market, but now he needs to be creative to stay ahead of the game.
Originally only making solid furniture like dining tables, cedars and beds, Raw Edge has diversified into pieces for kitchens and bathrooms, and even custom storage units.
“We are constant wood hunters when it comes to recycled timbers like jarrah, marri, blackbutt and tuart,” Eastwood says.
“Finding the right timber for the job can prove to be time consuming at times, but critical for the outcome.”
Eastwood says his furniture is inspired by prolific south west artists Russell Sheridan and Linda Scroly.

He’s always looking at ways to raise his high standards and wants to emulate high-end furniture makers like George Nakashima.
“We are fortunate to work and collaborate with some talented designers and architects in developing and constructing beautiful fit-outs in some beautiful houses,” Eastwood says.
“When the fit-out is paired with our furniture—that’s a glowing moment for us.”

Spencer Parks became a partner in Raw Edge about two years ago and specialises in contemporary design.
From start to finish, a piece could be inspired by “five different things in one”, and Park’s meticulous nature for clean lines and oil finishes is key, says Eastwood.

Competitive edge
November 18 – November 26, 2017

AQUARIUS (Jan 20 – Feb 18)
As you become more and more focussed throughout the week. First there will be a new Moon.

TAURUS (Apr 21 – May 20)
Though the last few weeks have been a little tricky to navigate, where fear hasn’t prevented much of your progress. Mercury, so straight talking is the key to breakthrough.

LEO (July 23 – Aug 22)
The Sun moves into Scorpio later in the week. You may feel a lot of passion and excitement. So hold onto it, try to navigate your way through it.

SCORPIO (Oct 24 – Nov 21)
The Sun leaves Scorpio later in the week, so expect your creative energy to go into overdrive. This is a fantastic talent that is easy to take for granted. Common sense is often way too easy to ignore. Often losing faith in yourself, you can do this, which will land you greater responsibility.

LIBRA (Sept 23 – Oct 22)
You are feeling rather detached. Balance is holding by your own reality in check with self-love and understanding, so you hold other people’s reality in check too. The New Moon will begin to give you more direction.
